New Boarding School Section Extends Reach of The CollegeBound Network

Staten Island, NY, May 20, 2009 – Boarding schools are more than a haven for teens in trouble. They have been proven to provide a highly satisfying high school experience, with students emerging well prepared for college and for life. In fact, according to a study conducted by the Art and Science, boarding schools provide the most academically challenging high school curriculum. Ninety-one percent of boarding school students surveyed felt they were sufficiently challenged, compared to 71 percent of private school students and 50 percent of public school students.

At The CollegeBound Network's new Boarding School channel, students and parents can peruse informative and engaging articles about all different types of boarding schools, including college prep boarding schools, military boarding schools, therapeutic boarding schools, Christian boarding schools, all-girls boarding schools, all-boys boarding schools, co-ed boarding schools, and junior boarding schools. Spotlight articles also provide an inside look at the nation's top boarding schools and boarding school companies to help students and parents determine which may be right for them. From there, Boarding School visitors can request free information from a variety of featured schools.

"Boarding school offers an excellent opportunity for intense academic and emotional preparation for college," says Luciano Rammairone, CEO of The CollegeBound Network. "We are pleased to partner with today's top boarding schools and provide resources for teens and their parents to make the best decisions about the all-important high school experience. As the leading postsecondary education portal in the country, The CollegeBound Network is committed to making that happen."
